

Dear

I'm so glad the State changed the law to let you create a marine mammal park. I was really excited too when I heard the judge decided the seals can stay and the beach won't be dredged.

I've learned a lot about the seals by going to different websites and hope the controversy is finally over. What a waste of the City's money. Every time I go to see them, I tell my friends and classmates how cool they are... basking on the sand, crawling like little worms on the beach, and swimming so gracefully in the water.

We are so lucky in San Diego and have the seals. Every time friends and family visit, the first place we go is to Casa Beach.

Now that everything is going well and the City can protect them, please pass some laws to keep people from bothering them. I hate it when I go to the beach and no seals are there. Then someone tells me some people went on the beach and scared them all away.

Sometimes nature can fend for itself, but when it lives so close to people I think we have a responsibility to lend a helping hand. They can't help it that their home is in an urban area. I know they'd do the same for us if it were the other way around. I've heard about lots of wild animals who have saved people when they were hurt or about to die.

Lots of people think politicians are bad people, but I don't think that's true. I think what politicians do today can help shape the future.

Sincerely,
